Chaplain

"it's love by whom
(my beautiful friend)
the gift to live is without until"

Fusion marks the essential trend of modern man. The era of arrogant solitude has passed and we now witness and experience an agonizing outpouring of man's spirit through all the pathways of life in search of a mutual bond. The piercing cry which shatters the wall of racial separation, the desperate sob of the underprivileged which haunts the rich societies, and the soul-searing desire for religious unity which torments modern church men — these all reflect man's growing awareness that we must look for the fulfillment of self through the life-giving union of humankind.

This fundamental impulse toward communion, indicative of our generation, has penetrated the sphere of academic life at Regis. Acknowledgment, communication and mutual understanding are the keynotes of campus society. Foremost among those to strike these notes is our chaplain, Reverend Dennis M. Burns, J.C.D., whose spirit and influence seem fired by the plea of his divine exemplar: "That they all may be One, as Thou, Father, in Me and I in Thee."

Through his unique position in the college community as both teacher and chaplain, Father Burns has inspired and fostered an ideal of unity, a unity which is continuously incorporating, yet not confounding. This spirit of unity is generated by his pervading warmth of spirit, his own acceptance of the value of the individual, and his constant self-giving in Christian love.

It is, then, with deep admiration and loving gratitude that we dedicate the 1966 Mount Regis to our chaplain, Father Dennis M. Burns.

Dedication

Father Dennis Burns celebrates the special Mass offered during Dad-Daughter Weekend. Joan McNamara and Mr. McNamara are servers.

Student-teacher rapport reaches a high point in Father Burns' senior Ethics class. Here is one of those moments of intense communication.

The sometimes humorous, but always wise, counseling of Father Burns at the marriage lectures will leave a lasting impression in the minds of these students.

An always present and appreciative participant at Regis functions, Father Burns is served supper by Mr. Leo Chang at the home economics sponsored demonstration.

"seeker of truth
follow no path
all paths lead where truth is here"

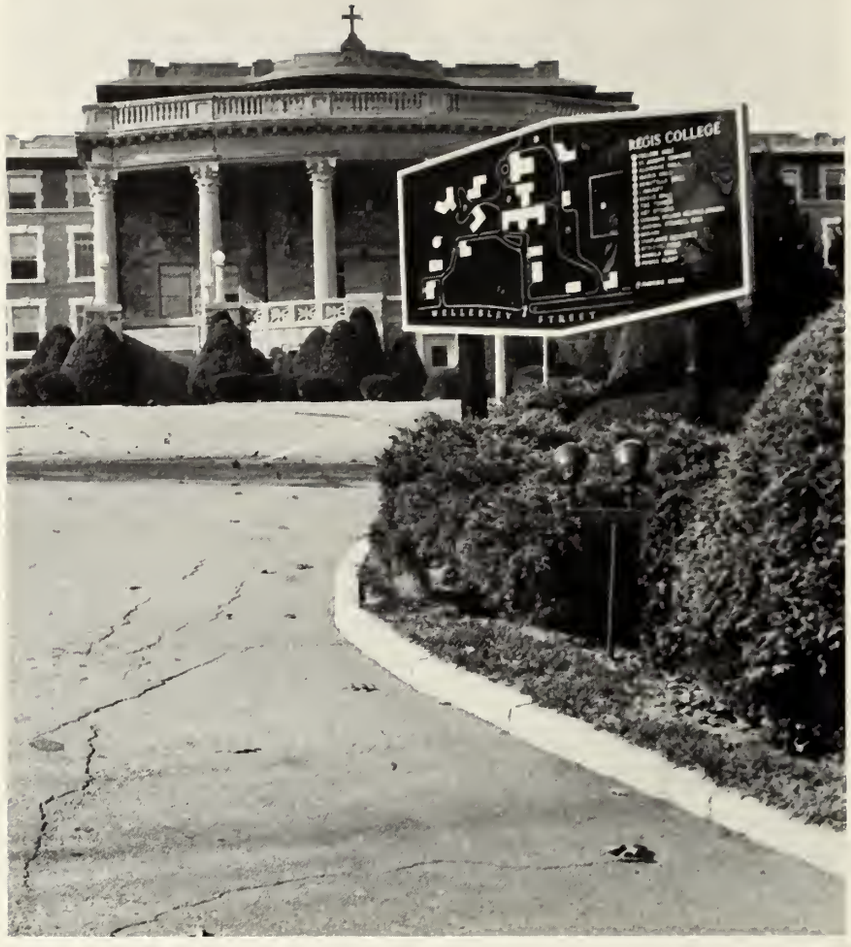
Knowledge is the sweetness of the human mind. It affords us fresh insights into the various facets of human activity, while leading us to a state of self-awareness and introspection. As students completing our undergraduate courses, we emerge into the mainstream of life with a solid foundation. We have thus formed a schematic framework of ideas for the establishment of ideals and personality. The four year give-and-take of college life has been a period of growth from partial development to adult maturity; the trials have strengthened us for challenges that lie ahead.

A variety of impressions and stimuli have impinged themselves upon the consciousness of each of us during our college life. The same activities and the varied opinions, attitudes, and convictions experienced during the brief span of four years have affected each student in a unique way, refining and clarifying objectives. Social and cultural programs sponsored by the College, such as the faculty lecture series, constitute outstanding channels for adopting more universal interpretations of mankind and for developing a variety of selves through communication with others in all spheres of endeavor.

Each of us has engaged in an individual quest for truth — truth to pursue, to respond, to question. We have united ourselves with the Regis administration and faculty in their search for truth — to guide, to stimulate, to challenge. Impetus is given to this search both by the introduction of new ideas and the release of thought currents — the former through campus delegates such as the NSA representatives, the latter through conferences held at Regis of which the National History Conference is an outstanding example.

In our united intellectual efforts, we can look for encouragement, guidance and hope in the words: "all paths lead where truth is here."

College Life



"You are here," reads the arrow on the campus directory, and you are ready to start your college career at Regis.

The Regis campus, whether in sunshine or in rain, always retains its distinctive charm.

somewhere unspeaking sits my life

Home away from home – that's what Maria Hall is for Nancy Sullivan, Kitty Sullivan, and Mary Ellen Powers.

"Tune-up" time in College Hall — Mary Carol Culligan, Nancy Szarek, Jean Rodgers, and Marlene Belviso create their own entertainment with a medley of folk songs.

"We told them we needed more phones," declare these College Hall residents.

With communication as the campus keynote for the collegiate year 1965-1966, the upperclassmen of Maria and Domitilla Halls participated in a new experience of integrated dorm living. Maria is no longer the mysterious sanctuary of black gowns, tassled caps, constant clicking of typewriter keys, and thick horn-rimmed glasses. The two dorms now boast the unbeatable combination of sophomore wisdom, junior enthusiasm and senior maturity.

Janet Banas takes advantage of those precious moments of quiet to accomplish some concentrated study in the Maria Hall lounge.

Domitilla "221" has a tree-decorating party! Angie Mace, Sue Carter, and Donna Murphy add their artistic touch to this traditional Christmas symbol.

Domitilla Hall is one of the student residences.

"Cheer up, Kate! Hair does grow back," reassures the patient. But Kate Pearson is determined to do her job well.

Our campus Streisand, Carroll Monahan, does a rendition of "My Man" during an off-moment of academic pursuit.

The time comes in each student's life when domestic duties are a must. Mary O'Hearne reluctantly succumbs to her fate.

Pat Johnson and Joan Carroll take a break for subs and cokes in the Domitilla lounge.

Donna Kirby and Mary Lou Foley experiment with comic dialogue to the delight of Maria Hall residents.

Maureen Scott and Kathy D'Arcy, totalling her bridge score, relax in the College Hall dorm.

Scene: Maria Hall. Ann Bernson and Ellen Sullivan frolic at the Halloween party with their rendition of a Viennese waltz.

Pat Carney, Betty Callahan and Terry Marani take a welcome break from their studies with Miss Frances Hoeffler, Maria Hall housemother.

Nanci Leverone and Sister M. Andrene exchange greetings at a coffee hour for faculty in Maria Hall.

Sister Anna Gertrude, fourth floor College Hall housemother, performs a familiar duty — the 10 o'clock check-in.

Sister M. Zita, third floor College Hall housemother, relaxes at her desk during a more quiet moment of dorm life.

Miss Genevieve McMahon, Domitilla Hall housemother, accommodates a visitor's request at the reception desk.

The newest of our dormitory facilities, Angela Hall, will house 230 girls upon completion.

Our days begin and end in this familiar spot. Alumnae Hall finds itself the "coordinator" of all student activities.

"No potatoes, please," requests a dieting student, while her colleagues anxiously anticipate the day's fare.

Day-hops, Ann Lalli and Maureen Cassinari, have found pleasant lunchtime company in the cafeteria — Mr. Leo Barrington, instructor in sociology.

In the colorful atmosphere of the student lounge, Eleanor Merrigan, Doreen Maguire, and Kate Pearson casually chat with Sister Marie Paula.

Mr. Edward DePelteau stands watching for the 5:00 p.m. onslaught of hungry Regis girls.

Esther Long, Student Association president, reviews old business during a monthly general assembly in the student union.

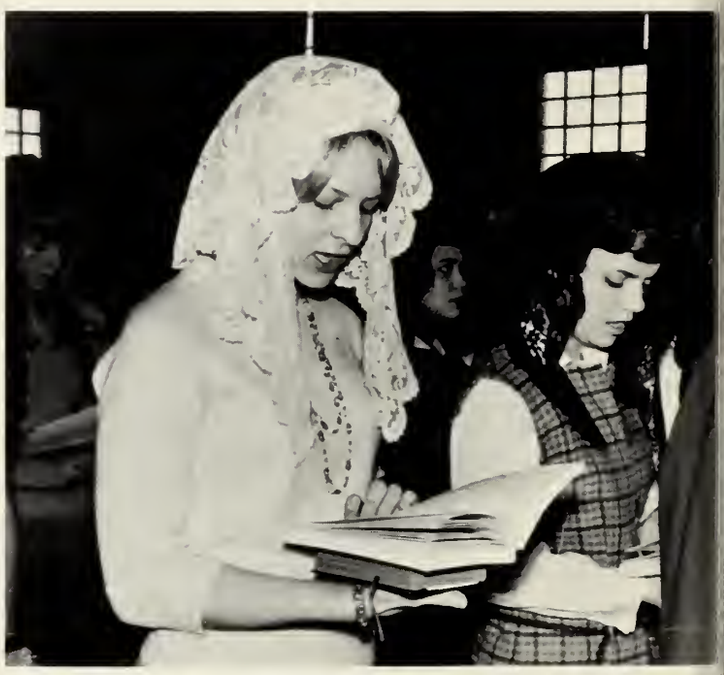
"This school is your school; this school is our school," is the assembly reminder from these spirited would-be freshmen.

"That's good enough to keep you with us for awhile," confirms Martha Gannon to a bed-ridden Regisite.

"How do you spell that?" queries nurse Mary Ann Audisio while her frustrated patient, Maureen Driscoll, tries to shift the thermometer.

Sister Marie, nurse, assists our physician, Dr. Raymond McCarty, patch Mary Holland's "skier's knee."

Father Francis McFarland begins the Offertory prayers as student and sister bring the cruets to the altar of sacrifice.



Louise Bury and Linda LaBreque join the community in a hymn of praise during the recessional.

Natalie Chamberlain leads the Communion procession during the special Mass in the round held in Alumnae Hall.

It is through participation in the Mass that the ultimate of the communal experience finds its realization on the Regis campus.

Winter splendor at Regis

Francine Bailey entertains her guest at a Sunday social in the pleasant surroundings of Regis Hall.

Regis Hall, the original building of the College, is a symbol of tradition and graciousness.

Sister Catherine Laboure and the class officers anticipate a successful college year at the officers' tea.

The Cardinal Spellman Philatelic Museum is the only museum in the country built solely for the showing and preserving of stamps.

Kathy Cass attempts to master the potter's wheel and readily admits it's harder than it looks.

Sister M. Fidelma, curator, adjusts one of the pages on display at the Philatelic Museum.

"I wonder what it is" muses Donna Murphy while fellow biology major, Donna Page, considers the abstract "rose" on exhibit in the art building.

Did Van Gogh go through this? Mary Jane Doherty experiences some of the agony of creativity in Art 322.

In the art building are facilities for painting, sculpture, and ceramics classes.

My Chau Duan, Vietnamese student, is treated to an oriental meal by thoughtful seniors, Betsy Burns and Cindy Gosselin.

B.C. had their hands full when they tackled the "scarlet ladies" of Regis one October day.

"And then she made me . . .," moans a harried frosh, Jean Dillingham, while Roberta Ferrarini, Elaine Leary, and Vilai Jaruthavee sympathize over the horrors of Beanie Week.

Junior class president, Maureen LaFountain, tacks up the day's notices as passerbys anxiously check for pertinent messages.

Student Association President Esther Long opens the floor to discussion at one of the weekly Council meetings.

Diane Valenti, senior class president, wades through the endless details of class activities at one of those Tuesday "high noon" encounters.

Miss Katherine McNally, Sister M. Ricarda, and Mrs. Constance Pooler help these students make use of library facilities.

Sister M. Fortunata examines issues of Newman's Apologia in the Newman Room of the library.

Eleanor McCarthy muses over the day's assignments in the pleasant atmosphere of the reading room.

Marcia Mawhinney, Sherrin O'Brien, Sue Clark, and Sheila Kelly inspect the famed Newman collection.

Sister M. Macrina, librarian, inspects some recent acquisitions for the German department.

Anne Ross quickly adjusts the date stamp during the morning reserve book rush.

Iva Mostecky ponders the concept of dynamic equilibrium in Sister M. Adria's general chemistry class.

"Plant Magic dust

The contemporary poet E. E. Cummings has seemingly captured the essence of the spirit of our Regis administration and faculty directed by our president Sister Jeanne d'Arc. The administration has implanted "Magic dust" into the life of the campus transforming it from an impersonal organization into a closely knit group of women sharing common interests, ideas, and ideals.

Concrete results of this "Magic dust" of progressive thinking, enthusiasm and maturity are witnessed in the construction of Angela Hall, a new dormitory with accommodations for close to three hundred students, and in the renovation of Regis Hall, the core of Regis tradition. Less tangible influences are evinced in the recent organization of faculty teas encouraging a free exchange and interplay of ideas among students, faculty and administration.

The administration and the faculty have effectively met the challenge to further the growth of the College in all spheres of endeavor. In the past the student body had cooperated closely with them to aid in shaping and moulding a particular philosophy of life which has permeated the social, academic, and spiritual arteries of student life. This Regis tradition has been modified and adopted by each succeeding class according to its needs, while still maintaining its essence and imbuing the fabric of student activity with a texture peculiar to the ideas and ideals of Regis as an entity.

Expectancy is the keynote of the present administration, an expectancy focused on the potential of the student body. Implicit within its expectancy is a challenge to all Regis students. By their wisdom, justice, and dignity, the administration and faculty have invited the students to join them in forging the future of Regis. Their expectancy is mingled with elements of hope, doubt, and wonder: hope born of student commitment at the Campus Community Conference and at student government elections, doubt rising from student lack of realization that Regis is her students, wonder springing from the moments of creativity, vigor, and dedication which characterize youth.

Vitality is a feature of youth. The growth of Regis College is paralleled by the evolution of unifying tradition which channels the vigor of her students into significant class activities and stimulating group action. This tradition, besides providing an outlet for enthusiasm, creativity and leadership, links the past, the present, and the future in an identity of action.

These characteristics of vitality and unity distinguish class and student body activities as well as group action. A few representative intra-class experiences include the sobering realization of senior maturity evoked by the Cap and Gown ceremony, the unlimited ecstacy effected by the events of Junior Week, the fiendish delight felt by the sophs during Beanie Week and the corresponding confusion of the tortured freshmen. More encompassing are the traditional joys of the Christmas banquet, the serenity of the candle lighting ritual, and the solemnity of the tree-planting ceremony — activities which inspire ideals and enrich personalities.

Expanding the role of traditional events on the Regis campus is a finely developed system of committees and interrelated clubs, designed to tap the energy of the student and to challenge her personal commitment. Some of the notable organizations are the social committee, the cultural committee, and the various departmental clubs. Several honor societies also function for the student's growth.

These activities are supplemental instruments. With them our potentialities may achieve a more complete reality.

Special Activities

Roses brighten Grace Previte's morning . . . and help the Lay Apostolate.

Karen Geyer stocks up on sweets at the Ethelon Club food sale.

Tower Society secretary, Judy Murray, conducts a prospective student and her parents on an informative tour of campus buildings.

Service as a part of community action is the keynote of the Regis spirit. Although the majority of students do not serve as active members of the Lay Apostolate, their tacit approval of this work is shown in the purchasing and the wearing of a flower on Rose Day. The overwhelming success of the Ethelon Food Sale is the direct result of the willingness of Regis girls to sponsor financially the activities of clubs and organizations. An infectious admiration for Regis is noted in the typical Regisite who enjoys "showing off" the campus to a prospective student. This program of guided tours under the direction of the recently established Tower Society is another tangible evidence of the wish to cooperate effectively through community action. These activities, and others like them, not only strengthen Regis internally through mutual exchange, but give her a continually expanding scope through their extension to the community of the world.

Senior home economics student, Andrea Owens, displays a beautiful ensemble at the department's annual fashion show.

Seniors Olivia Grant, Margie Joyce, Pat Nolan, and Honora Healey present Lilly, the one-act play that won first prize in the interclass play competition sponsored by the drama club.

Members of the athletic association glide along during their annual skating party at the Boston Skating Club.

Senator Kennedy exchanges ideas with Nancy Corcoran, Mary Ellen Powers, and Eileen Dooley — senior members of the government department and the Young Democrats.

Senator Ted Kennedy meets his "Regis supporters" after his lecture on United States policy in Vietnam, sponsored by the Young Democrats.

Mrs. Ellise Dillon enjoys an informal discussion with Sister M. St. Theresa following her talk on Irish literature in the Faculty Lecture Series.

"Parting is such sweet sorrow . . . ." The National Players, Inc. present another triumph, Romeo & Juliet.

Opportunities for enrichment and self-enlightment are sponsored by a number of campus groups for the benefit of the whole. Through the efforts of the dramatic department, Regis annually presents a Shakespearean production enacted by the National Players. The manifold diversity of topics in the Faculty Lecture Series, ranging from the changing role of woman to a new utopian literature, provides the catalyst for effective integration of the academic spheres. A significant broadening of the community atmosphere is perceived during the annual Mothers' Guild Bazaar. Here one sees enthusiasm and objectives truly indicative of the Regis spirit.

Choir boys entertain at Regis Hall as a new tradition, the Christmas tree lighting party, is inaugurated.

One of the meaningful traditions at Regis is the celebration of Christmas. The merry warmth of the banquet, the poignant beauty of the candle lighting ceremony, the joyful echoes of song-filled voices raised around the nativity scene — all these represent Christmas at Regis. This time, and the lingering memory of it, bind the members of the Regis family to one another, and to a fuller cognizance of the significance of the holyday.

The "Sociables," led by Rosemarie Sacco, join with fellow sociology majors, teachers, and guests to sing of the season's joy at the Ethelon party.

At the candlelighting ceremony Midge Sullivan, sophomore class president, proclaims the message of the candle of light to the assembly.

The creche, amidst a background of evergreens in the chapel, is a beautiful symbol of the ultimate message of Christmas.

Barbara Bowen proudly displays her new possession to delighted parents and to Chris Bartley, her senior sister.

Father Dennis Burns blesses Rachel Gustina's ring as senior sister, Betsy Burns, looks on.

Joan McNamara and her father hold the communion cloth as students and fathers approach during the communion procession.

Pam Piatelli and Nancy Garvey relax with Regis parents after a busy morning of classes.

The exciting new tradition — Winter Weekend — is aptly initiated by a formal dance in Alumnae Hall.

The theme "I could have danced all night" seems to reflect the sentiments of Beth Lewis and John Bowen at the Winter-in-Wonderland Ball.

Regisites and their dates spend a warm and musical afternoon listening to the lively banjo rhythms of the Gaslighters.

Saturday's fun begins with an old-fashioned hay ride from the Regis campus over Weston's country roads.

Everyone seems to agree. The Junior Prom is a success!

Diane Signorino, Junior Week chairman, presents roses to Nanci Leverone, chairman of the Junior Prom, in gratitude for her hard work.

The members of the receiving line greet the Juniors who cross the threshold of the ballroom in anticipation of a wonderful evening.

Sue Smith, our "Valiant Woman" receives the well-deserved honor of Prom Queen. As her court looks on, the Queen is crowned.

The regal splendor of the Louis XIV ballroom at the Somerset Hotel accentuates the elegance and the beauty of the prom.

"Seven Days in May," Junior Week, 1965, forms the backdrop for many memories. The genial atmosphere of the Parents' Banquet at The Meadows blended warmly with the spiritual glow of the class offering the Holy Sacrifice together.

We recall in the timeless genius of Maurice Chevalier on Theatre Night, and the exhilaration of Sports Night, the enjoyment of hours well spent. In the elegance of Junior Prom, and memories of our Saturday picnic and moonlight cruise, we see mirrored the joy-filled experiences of lasting friendships.

From beginning to end, our Junior Week reflected fully the spirit and personality of our class.

Deedie Carr, Gail Pandiani, Mary Jo Spinelli, and Peggy Ventre share the excitement of Junior Week with their parents at the Parents' Banquet.

A perfect end to a perfect evening — Guy Stephens sets the mood while Rosemary Eagan, Pat Johnson, and their dads dance the hours away.

The prospect of a night with Maurice Chevalier has excited Diane Valenti, Pat Donohue, and Sue Clark. On to the Shubert!

Pleasant company, lively conversation, and good food — Libby Chamberlain, Irene Megan, and Jane Cronin enjoy all three at the Communion Supper.

Ellen Sullivan gives her rendition of "Mammy," a la Al Jolson, with the assistance of Anne Ross and Betty Guidara.

Sue Smith, Pat Nolan and the urchins wistfully sing of the "Sweet Beginnings" to come.

Jane McCarthy, chairman of the senior show, presents roses to Sister M. John, director of the Regis Lay Apostolate.

The entire cast takes a bow for Broadway: Yesterday, Today, and Tomorrow.

Bishop Minihan, assisted by Father Burns, presents Clare Donaher with her well-earned symbol of achievement, the cap and gown.

On Founder's Day, at an impressive ceremony in the Tower Garden, Bishop Minihan presented each senior with the traditional cap and gown. The donning of the stiff, tassled. cap and flowing black robe is a symbolic indication of the distinction, recognition and respect accorded the seniors for their accomplishment of academic achievement here at Regis.

The spontaneous action of a happy crowd — song! Joan Carroll, Mary Lou Collins, Sue Airoldi, Diane Valenti, Sue Clark, and Kathy Cass help Deedie Carr celebrate a birthday, an added attraction to the Founder's Day exercises.

Joan McNamara and Jane McCarthy make a few last-minute adjustments before their big moment arrives.

Joan McNamara and Esther Long lead the senior class after the Founder's Day Cap and Gown ceremony at the Tower Gardens.

"What's wholly

is that you &
i are more than you & i (be e It's we)"

The moment — September 1962; the occasion — the birth of a Regis class, our class. Four years of close contact with others in a variety of intellectual pursuits and social programs have transformed us into a unified whole. The casual classmates of freshman days have become our close companions under the excitement and stress of college life. Viewed in retrospect, this senior class has developed a distinct personality set against a panoramic vision of memories.

The challenges of our freshman year revealed a core of creativity and conviction stemming from established individuality. At the beginning we were many "I"s, an aggregate of personalities united by chance and choice.

As sophomores, we grew in a group-consciousness which gradually deepened through the shared experience of a national tragedy, the common anxiety of sophomore testing, and the happiness of a successful spring weekend.

Junior year introduced us to the realm of campus leadership. This responsibility drew on the strength of individuals, yet welded a whole — one which received an added dimension at the class retreat and became the pervading spirit of a memorable Junior Week.

Now we anticipate the heartache of coming separation. Assured of many trials to test our class integrity, we crossed the demanding frontier of our senior year, the final step in our college education. But from the joint class efforts of "Broadway - Yesterday, Today, and Tomorrow" to the wistful melancholy encountered at the Christmas banquet, from the unique experience undergone in the January depth program to the throbbing joy felt on graduation day, what was "wholly marvelous" was that you and I were "We."

February 4, 1945 - February 24, 1966

A vibrant stride, an infectious grin, a delight with life and those who possess it, the courage to endure, the faith to accept - these are lingering memories for those who knew and loved Joan Carroll.

A slender wisp, a quiet smile, a warmth, the gift to give, the strength to bear - these, though far, are poignantly near to the classmates of the late Mary Heffernan.

MARY FRANCES HEFFERNAN

Psychology

March 31, 1944 - April 17, 1965

As the life of the Class of 1966 at Regis draws to a close, and 165 young women prepare to abandon the collegiate experience for other ways of life, each senior finds herself faced with the question, what have these years at Regis meant to me? The responses are innumerable.

Although, by our desire to come to Regis, we indicated our mutual aspiration to the ideal of Christian womanhood, the notion of what that ideal embodied was different in every new student. From divergent backgrounds we brought our divergent ideas hoping through formal education, close friendships, and stimulating social relationships to consolidate, define, and individualize more deeply our view of life. While we have formed a unified class body acting for four years with single corporate purpose, each member of the Class of 1966 has been striving to fulfill a basic intent, the development of self. In the measure of the attainment of her individual objectives, she can determine the meaning of her Regis career.

In this context, the e. e. cummings quotation which opened this section of our yearbook assumes a greater significance. Indeed, Regis College does provide a "wholly marvelous" environment, not only because here each "i" and "you" conscientiously aims to make a "we," but from the solidity of the "we" each "i" and "you" becomes stronger and more unique. Regis is singular in its close interaction between student and faculty, religious and lay, and upper and lower classmen. The dignity of the institution certainly rises from it, but each member of the community benefits as well.

Several people with whom we have been closely associated during these years hold special importance for all seniors, regardless of personal interest. They are the three members of the College Continuing Education Division who have studied with us, and the Sister students from the Framingham campus. Mrs. Velma Hoover, a sociology major, familiarly known as Jackie to all of us, Mary Ellen Minihan, a psychology major, and Sister Kevin, O.P., an art major, are members of the C. E. D. with whom many of us have formed fast friendships. Sharing also in the memorable classes and activities of our college life have been Sister Marie Annunciata, a mathematics major, and Sister Dorothy Francis, a chemistry major, who have commuted each day from the Scholasticate in Framingham. Although these two Sisters of St. Joseph will be graduated with their fellow sister students studying at Framingham, and the members of the Continuing Education Division in August, each of them has become a vital part of the spirit of the Class of 1966.

From these particular relationships and others like them every senior has realized personal value. She has had the unique opportunity at Regis to interrelate with those for whom the same collegiate period has connotations so different from her own. In this way, the unequalled "we" of Regis has made each senior a more perfect "i," and thus better equipped to fulfill her ideal of the Christian woman.

The diligent ones confer in the inner sanctum of the Mount Regis office: Sister M. Andrius, Nancy Szarek, Libby Chamberlain, Sue Carter, Cindy Gosselin, Judy Kelly, Sue Airoldi, Jane Cronin.

The production of the 1966 Mount Regis has been a rewarding experience for every staff member. Without the assistance of many other people, however, the publication of our yearbook could never have been realized.

Our deepest thanks go to Sister Andrius, our adviser, whose helpful suggestions and tireless efforts were invaluable in the planning and the completion of this book.

For their photographic contributions we are most grateful to Mr. Phillip Hopkins, Public Relations Director, and the Fay Foto Service. To Mr. Thomte and Burdette & Co. and to Mr. Hookailo and his staff at Hookailo Studios, we also extend our appreciation.

We are also indebted to e. e. cummings, contemporary American poet, who aided us in giving expression to the community spirit which is a cornerstone of the Regis way of life. Most sincerely we express our gratitude to the people at Regis who inspired and sustained us in this attempt.
